

Honoring Life through the Secret Place of Knowing Within

Writers and Readers Budapest Magdalene Channeling

February 12, 2020

I am very happy to be here with you again. Each of us has walked together in and through time and many of you remember when that was. I am feeling our times together as waves that take us back and forth in time and there is no distance.

As I view the world now it is apparent to me that the problems stem or originate or start from each person not remembering, because when we remember, we know. And so I want you to remember who you are to me and who I am to you, and of course, you know that not from your mind but from your heart.

The picture of your connection to me or the space of our Oneness is felt most strongly in your soul. If you think about the soul as being a spark in the body that exists between your heart and your belly then you begin to remember what we did together so many moons hence and before—the weave, before and back. Some of you will walk with me more strongly in the future and that is why I say that we are moving in time through the wave of our union.

So you can imagine that if you knew that you were my friend, or my lover, or my parent, or my fellow disciple, that you would step into that memory and carry it proudly. You would feel like you could take your place in the story of humanity's evolution. I just wanted to say that we have all been together before so that you can begin to step into the power of that knowing.

I am coming to many people now in many ways. I look through the eyes of one that can see. I listen with one who has ears to hear, and I see each of you and hear each of your calls to return to the sacredness of the time that we spent together. I have been many people in many times, however, the consistent thing about me is that I always represent the Divine Feminine. The Divine Feminine is not a woman/man thing, it is an essence of life. When I come to the people, I request that they honor life because honoring life is the way home and the way that the heart works best.

You have been with me in many times in many ways and the archetype of the Magdalene is how you identify me through time. So together we are now creating a place for this feminine energy that honors life because it is what is missing in our world. Just for a moment feel what I said; that the honoring of life has been either denied or overlooked in its importance.

When you love and honor me you love and honor what I stand for and when we stand for it together, then the world changes. So if you are to imagine that I am sitting here in this chair, just as you remember me with the adoring and honoring eyes that I see, then you come this way and you turn around and you honor everyone and everything the same way.

When the one Gabriella and I walked the books to the people, when Magdalene and Gabriella had brought the book to the people, we together sent this light of honoring. Perhaps you received it. Yeah? So we made a pact, an agreement, Magdalena, Gabriella, and this energy of our union, and we brought to your world now what I brought to the world then—what I am now asking you to bring. I'm asking you to bring the honoring of life to each other.

The quality that you offer to me as Magdalene, some of you to this one here as well, is what I am requesting that you turn from me, from us, and turn to offer each other no matter if you know the person or not.

There is a special part in your heart and soul that is reserved for honoring. If you could think of your heart as an orb or circle and the Seed of your soul as a diamond, where they meet is the place of honoring. So I want you to feel it. Maybe you put your hand on your heart and your hand on your Seed, two hands, one on top of the other. Where your thumb and little finger come together is that point of honoring. Breathe into that place, maybe with your eyes closed, and think of me, think of the honoring that we are exchanging. When you put your attention there your honoring grows and as the honoring grows it surrounds and includes the heart and the full soul.

Honoring is actually the greatest gift that you can give because honoring wraps the heart and the soul in the same way to all that come before you. It is not about someone earning your honoring. It is that when you offer honoring to others, they will become honorable. You see when the people came to me, I would honor them immediately and they would find within themselves that which was to be honored. It was actually my greatest gift for them because it made them aware that they were special and that they were seen and that they were blessed.

I did this with this place, you know, what you are doing now. Focus here. That is what I would do and I would send from here and from my eyes at the same moment. I would send it to their essence. It was very sweet, very poignant, very meaningful and it moved them deeply. It was like a secret weapon. So I give it to you for free.

If you were not honoring me you could not honor each other. You see, this is the way it is, the cards that were dealt. When you honor me then you are able to honor each other. Sometimes there is great resistance to honoring. You know, people have to prove that they are worthy, oh, many things, but now we cut that requirement and we decide together that we are going to now begin to use this secret to the advantage of all beings that we meet.

So when you want to practice you focus your attention at the bottom of the heart, the top of the Chrystallis spark. When you do that, this is the secret actually, the honoring goes up to your eyes and you are actually seeing differently. It is not very well written or recorded the ways that I was taught about the secret ways, the secret paths. This way of honoring and the focus here bring up to the eyes immediately, without effort. This was possible only because when I learned it, I learned it in a circle of teachers who were sending it toward me.

Imagine the place of Egypt with marble floors and walls and ceilings, teachers in robes of many colors, one color each, but many colors. Girls and women of the lineage of Isis coming into the center of a circle that is held in a secret spirituality. I would first bow to the earth, my knees, my legs, my hands on her body and I would feel her honoring in my heart. I would lift my head and look and I would see a flame that was held in a sacred container and the flame would touch my third eye. From the sides around me there would be this wave of honoring that would surround me and permeate, come inside of me, and I would be unable to stand unless I received every single cell of the consciousness that was directed toward me. The requirement to pass the test was to receive the honoring in every pore of my body from the earth, the people, the sky, the elements.

This is because I would not be given permission to work with the people if I could not hold the charge of Truth within my body. We have not yet created the same conditions that I was having to meet here, but because this one is American we have a short cut. So I give to you without you having to endure what I had to endure. I joke about it some, you know, give you a teasing for it but it is actually because we are under a very strong pressure for time.

When I lived as Magdalene in that time there were many pressures that defined our reality but they are nothing compared to the pressures of your reality. We knew each other intimately, strongly and shared one vision. We remembered the design and we lived it together and worked to create it together. For many of you, years went by before you found each other and many, many have not found what they have come to find. So I want you to be able to go directly, this one is putting in my mind the Monopoly game. Anyway, go directly to the place in your being where you have everything you need to start this strong process of honoring.

Now last evening I was eavesdropping on the conversation with The Ones with No Names and they made it very clear that we are no longer supposed to fix anything, because if we are trying to fix something that it is separate. People are separate, ideas or relationships, these things which they call duality, then are/we are still in duality because we are feeling separate from that which we are trying to fix.

So I present for you this idea of honoring as a way to relate to others in a more strong and clear way. If you are very clear about the honoring and its ability to change the world, then you can join with me and we can begin. One of the things that you know is that there is really no time and no distance. Wherever you go in your world, wherever you travel, I can go with you. I have the ability to go with all of you wherever you go. It is a bit complicated but it is possible. So you can have me with you and support for you your honoring practice so that we become a team of honoring that then goes beyond your wildest dreams.

Just for a moment, men and women here, imagine that you are wearing a sacred robe and as you walk among the people they sense the presence of someone sacred and Divine. And you are walking slowly and spreading the Divine wherever you walk so that it is beneath your feet and it is around your body. The motion of your body arrests or stops the thought of those people around you. They cannot think in the face of the Divine. They cannot think in the presence of the Divine. That is your secret weapon.

Maybe you have on regular clothes, it doesn't matter. Maybe you are in jeans or what you wear these days. You are walking anyway as if your robe is of velvet. You are carrying a scepter made of gold, a golden scepter. Your feet go deeply into the earth, below the surface of the earth so you are calling forth in every step the magnificence of the Divine Mother Earth. Your eyes are bright. Your shoulders are relaxed. Your heart and soul are joined and everything around you is holy. It may sound like someone you have thought of as a saint or someone that you have thought of as an archetype or an archangel or whatever, but actually all you have to do is put on the robe. And you can put it on actually or figuratively, you know, pretend. It is when you walk in that majestic way, honoring every breath, that the minds of the people stop.

Now when the mind stops the eyes open because there is some abrupt change in the atmosphere. People are looking to see what has happened. It is like with a loud noise. If you hear a loud noise there is an instant where your mind doesn't know what to do so then it tries to figure it out and this is the same thing.

What we are going to think about together for the rest of our lives is that we are in this divine place and we do not need anything else. I want to invite you to lay down on this floor, on all these rocks, anything that you no longer want. You are now going to say I am this Divine being and what I consider to be my failures or shortcomings I leave in the room when I go. So the honoring is of yourself and of all other aspects, as well.

So there is nothing else about this that is necessary except to know that you are complete with all of the lessons that you thought you needed to learn. Like, it's over. Your story is done and all these things that you carry as burdens, they are no longer appropriate. When you are second-guessing, third-guessing, fourth-guessing yourself, when you need assurance, reassurance, super-reassurance, it is done.

The honoring is a way for you to go forward from this time and this place right now. You do not need to do it alone but you do need to do it now. So we are changing the patterns that you have come to think of as true about yourself. We are changing the patterns that you have come to think of as the way the world is because all of your perceptions about the world, that include better or worse, are inaccurate. This is because if you compare anything to anything you are in duality.

For you now it is, well, I will say the word imperative, mandatory, like necessary, you know, for you to change the way that you think so that you are free from these concepts that no longer serve you or the world.

Let us again put our hands or fingers here where they come together, these two places. The bottom of the circle of the heart and the top of the pyramid of the soul and breathe in there a few times in and out through that point. When you focus there it will get very, very warm and you will feel something happening in your body. What I had to learn to do was to open that with my mind and not my hands. You will practice as long as you need to with your fingers or your hands and then you stop and use your mind.

Now what happens as it moves out from your physical body is that it creates a field, a strong container field of this honoring that we are speaking about. You may feel that also in your forehead or your third eye at the same time as it grows and it will feel uncomfortable if you do not let it come through your eyes now. So it starts here and expands out. It completely is contained around your body in a big circle, touches your perception here about all that is, here, the big one. When that touches the third eye it opens the eyes to see through the inner eyes. Yeah. Then everything you see has the quality of being holy! So this is my message and my secret gift for you.

If you ask me when you do it, I say all the time. If you ask me who to do it with, I say everyone. If you ask me what happens if you forget, I say just start remembering again. If you ask me how to honor yourself, I say start in the mirror. If you say I have trouble with this person or that person or the other person, I say then find an animal first or a plant or a mountain. If you have trouble with people start with nature. A very nice trick is that if there is someone that is challenging for you, you start honoring with something that is easy to honor. You grow the honor and you grow it and grow it and grow it and then think of the person that is hard.

I answer these questions that you might be asking because I know that you may ask them, but also because there is no excuse not to do this. There is probably in this language, as well, a saying about whether what came first was the chicken or the egg. You may say, well, how can I honor if something is not honorable. Right? What the world has neglected to understand is that honoring is always first. Honoring creates more honoring, creates more honoring.

This is the message for this evening. I thank you for your honoring. Your honoring of me and this one here both, opens our capacity to see you more clearly and for you to see yourself more clearly because it is a circle, you see. The honoring comes here but then it goes back to you. Honoring is not a one-way street and you do not want to honor something other than or more than yourself without also honoring yourself.

Again, when you walk out the door leave all of the patterns that stop you from being who you are right here. Acknowledge that you have been given the key to happiness and that everything is now different. Recognize that your dishonoring of yourself has been a crutch that you have carried for every day of your life and that you do not any longer need to carry it. We all agree. Right?

(All agree)

Okay. So the how question that you will ask is to focus here, carry that with you, walk in the robes of the Divine. When you feel pressure in your head know that your eyes are opening and whatever you see then is honored. As you practice you will not only send honoring through your eyes. You will send it through your whole being and you will realize that it is your natural state. Then you will be free to live among the people and to gather their respect and give them your respect.

One of the most beautiful things is when people actually decide to live up to their honoring, because that is necessary for there to be this called co-creation, creating together. So if you want to create together this new world then honoring is the first step. Now I think I did a very good job, but are there any questions?

I want to thank you for the honor and privilege of being allowed to speak to you of my greatest yearning for humanity. I want you to understand I have never spoken of it before. The reason that I have never spoken about it before is because many times I am speaking in the one country, America. What I find here is that honoring is much more normal. Americans are too brash, too oh, well, they are too something to make it normal for honoring to be given.

They would not understand, as you do, what honoring is. It would be a word that they would want to apply to someone special. I find here that you honor each other as a matter of your daily bread and it is most beautiful for my heart to see. So I want you to know how special this is, how much I appreciate it, and how much I hope that in your own way, in your own life, it will make a vast difference for you.

So I thank you for your kind attention for being willing to hear this Truth from my lips and for the greatest gift of all, which is your capacity to honor. Thank you so much.

I will go with you wherever you go. Just call me and I will be there and we will apply our secret to every person, every animal, every element in this universe because we can.

Shalom.

Translator: We are thankful for you for writing these books and we are thankful for Gabi that she has translated your book into Hungarian.

Thank you all very much for this evening.
